

Memorial Services At Many Churches For Bishop Greer

Letter From Dr. Parks Read
at St. Bartholomew's;
Dr. Manning and Bishop
Burch Eulogize Him

Memorial services were held yesterday for Bishop David H. Greer at St. Bartholomew's, Trinity and several other Protestant Episcopal churches. At St. Bartholomew's, where the Bishop was rector for fifteen years, the congregation offered prayers, and a letter was read from Dr. Leighton Parks, eulogizing Dr. Greer, whom he succeeded upon Dr. Greer's elevation to the bishopric. At Trinity the sermon was preached by the rector, Dr. William T. Manning, who spoke of the Bishop as a man of the strongest purpose in the diocese of Christ.

"It is too soon for us to speak many words of him or of his work among us," said Dr. Manning. "But we can say this: that the central note of his life was his desire to be a true disciple of our Lord. No one could be near the Bishop without knowing this was his aim. No one could know him without feeling the simplicity of his purpose."

Dr. Manning's sermon was a tribute to Bishop Greer in an address following the confirmation services at the Church of the Transfiguration.

"You are starting out this afternoon as builders of character, as builders of spiritual existence," said Bishop Burch. "The late Bishop Greer was one of the greatest builders I have ever known. Every one who came in contact with him recognized him as a builder, a building influence."

"You will not think it strange," he said, "that I find at least a relationship at heart between David the king and our dear Bishop. Surely the chief pastor of this diocese was a man after God's own heart. He was a man inspired by a glowing faith. In all his sermons the preacher unintentionally revealed the windows of his own soul and all of them opened to God."

"His faith made him an optimist and an enthusiast. He never failed to take the large view. He could see difficulties, but he saw that the inspirations were greater. Whatever ought to be done could be done, and he was ready to begin at once. He always was a builder, and difficulties disappeared when the man of faith advanced."

"The Right Rev. Charles E. Burch, Suffragan Bishop of New York, paid a tribute to Bishop Greer in an address following the confirmation services at the Church of the Transfiguration."

"You are starting out this afternoon as builders of character, as builders of spiritual existence," said Bishop Burch. "The late Bishop Greer was one of the greatest builders I have ever known. Every one who came in contact with him recognized him as a builder, a building influence."

"You will not think it strange," he said, "that I find at least a relationship at heart between David the king and our dear Bishop. Surely the chief pastor of this diocese was a man after God's own heart. He was a man inspired by a glowing faith. In all his sermons the preacher unintentionally revealed the windows of his own soul and all of them opened to God."

"His faith made him an optimist and an enthusiast. He never failed to take the large view. He could see difficulties, but he saw that the inspirations were greater. Whatever ought to be done could be done, and he was ready to begin at once. He always was a builder, and difficulties disappeared when the man of faith advanced."

"The Right Rev. Charles E. Burch, Suffragan Bishop of New York, paid a tribute to Bishop Greer in an address following the confirmation services at the Church of the Transfiguration."

"You are starting out this afternoon as builders of character, as builders of spiritual existence," said Bishop Burch. "The late Bishop Greer was one of the greatest builders I have ever known. Every one who came in contact with him recognized him as a builder, a building influence."

"You will not think it strange," he said, "that I find at least a relationship at heart between David the king and our dear Bishop. Surely the chief pastor of this diocese was a man after God's own heart. He was a man inspired by a glowing faith. In all his sermons the preacher unintentionally revealed the windows of his own soul and all of them opened to God."

the sincerity of his character and the reality of his faith. It is much to be able to say of any man to-day, especially of one in high office, charged with great responsibilities, that the chief note of his life was his simple goodness and his desire to do God's will."

"The Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires chose for his text at St. Thomas' 'The Lord hath sought him a man after his own heart,' a manner of speech which, he said, was applicable to the character of the late Bishop Greer as it was to that of David."

"You will not think it strange," he said, "that I find at least a relationship at heart between David the king and our dear Bishop. Surely the chief pastor of this diocese was a man after God's own heart. He was a man inspired by a glowing faith. In all his sermons the preacher unintentionally revealed the windows of his own soul and all of them opened to God."

"His faith made him an optimist and an enthusiast. He never failed to take the large view. He could see difficulties, but he saw that the inspirations were greater. Whatever ought to be done could be done, and he was ready to begin at once. He always was a builder, and difficulties disappeared when the man of faith advanced."

"The Right Rev. Charles E. Burch, Suffragan Bishop of New York, paid a tribute to Bishop Greer in an address following the confirmation services at the Church of the Transfiguration."

"You are starting out this afternoon as builders of character, as builders of spiritual existence," said Bishop Burch. "The late Bishop Greer was one of the greatest builders I have ever known. Every one who came in contact with him recognized him as a builder, a building influence."

"You will not think it strange," he said, "that I find at least a relationship at heart between David the king and our dear Bishop. Surely the chief pastor of this diocese was a man after God's own heart. He was a man inspired by a glowing faith. In all his sermons the preacher unintentionally revealed the windows of his own soul and all of them opened to God."

"His faith made him an optimist and an enthusiast. He never failed to take the large view. He could see difficulties, but he saw that the inspirations were greater. Whatever ought to be done could be done, and he was ready to begin at once. He always was a builder, and difficulties disappeared when the man of faith advanced."

"The Right Rev. Charles E. Burch, Suffragan Bishop of New York, paid a tribute to Bishop Greer in an address following the confirmation services at the Church of the Transfiguration."

"You are starting out this afternoon as builders of character, as builders of spiritual existence," said Bishop Burch. "The late Bishop Greer was one of the greatest builders I have ever known. Every one who came in contact with him recognized him as a builder, a building influence."

"You will not think it strange," he said, "that I find at least a relationship at heart between David the king and our dear Bishop. Surely the chief pastor of this diocese was a man after God's own heart. He was a man inspired by a glowing faith. In all his sermons the preacher unintentionally revealed the windows of his own soul and all of them opened to God."

"His faith made him an optimist and an enthusiast. He never failed to take the large view. He could see difficulties, but he saw that the inspirations were greater. Whatever ought to be done could be done, and he was ready to begin at once. He always was a builder, and difficulties disappeared when the man of faith advanced."

"The Right Rev. Charles E. Burch, Suffragan Bishop of New York, paid a tribute to Bishop Greer in an address following the confirmation services at the Church of the Transfiguration."

"You are starting out this afternoon as builders of character, as builders of spiritual existence," said Bishop Burch. "The late Bishop Greer was one of the greatest builders I have ever known. Every one who came in contact with him recognized him as a builder, a building influence."

"You will not think it strange," he said, "that I find at least a relationship at heart between David the king and our dear Bishop. Surely the chief pastor of this diocese was a man after God's own heart. He was a man inspired by a glowing faith. In all his sermons the preacher unintentionally revealed the windows of his own soul and all of them opened to God."

"His faith made him an optimist and an enthusiast. He never failed to take the large view. He could see difficulties, but he saw that the inspirations were greater. Whatever ought to be done could be done, and he was ready to begin at once. He always was a builder, and difficulties disappeared when the man of faith advanced."

"The Right Rev. Charles E. Burch, Suffragan Bishop of New York, paid a tribute to Bishop Greer in an address following the confirmation services at the Church of the Transfiguration."

Where Are the Great Preachers?

As Pastor of Central Congregational, Brooklyn, Dr. S. Parkes Cadman Has Become Community Force

Epigrams Widely Quoted

Carries a Human Note in His Sermons, Sometimes Tender, at Other Times Stern

When Brooklyn's old 23d Regiment marched away for border duty a clergyman in olive drab had a place on the extreme left of the colonel's staff. He made his way, puffing every now and then, and under a hot July sun, the perspiration flowed down his face. Craftily he looked round to see how the others were standing it. They were marching with a chin well in, apparently finding no hardship in the combination of the scorching heat from above and the hard pavements below.

Finally there came a halt. An order "At ease!" was given. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman tore off his campaign hat and mopped his brow.

"That's the longest march I have had in years," he confided, looking to one of his fellow officers. "But I'm a soldier and I'll stick."

Dr. Cadman was portly and bony, anything but a clerical mien. Some years before he had worn a mustache and it had concealed the lines of his mouth. When he went to the Central Congregational Church in Brooklyn he realized he had the biggest proposition of his life on his hands, and he stripped for action. The mustache went. Its removal disclosed a determined mouth. It was the firm mouth of a fighter, yet it could break into a most winsome smile.

Mouth Symbol of the Man
Taking the mouth as a symbol, you can read the character of the man. He can be hard, almost bitter, when the occasion demands. But when there is a call for tenderness, the smile spreads all over his features.

It is a tradition that Dr. Cadman spent some time in his youth as a miner. Somewhere, perhaps it was down in the bowels of the earth, Dr. Cadman early in life came face to face with great issues. There he learned more about men's souls than most men ever learn, and his contact gave him a wonderfully appealing note in his preaching.

Dr. Cadman was born in Shropshire, England. He was the son of a Wesleyan minister whose ambition was to turn the boy's thoughts to the pastorate. Graduating from London University he was licensed as a Wesleyan preacher. He came to New York City when he was 28 years old and his credentials were sufficient to admit him on trial in the New York Conference for a year. At the end of the twelve-month he had made his mark and was assigned to the Central Methodist Church, Yonkers. He attracted hundreds to the Yonkers church and his appeal was largely to men. They flocked to hear him because he seemed to understand their problems.

After two years he was asked to assume the task of rehabilitating the old Central Church in this city, which changed its name to the Metropolitan Tabernacle.

He remained there five years and was called to the Central Congregational Church in Brooklyn. This had been one of the houses of worship that had given to Brooklyn a succession of pulpits. Its work had grown so large that it had become necessary to create a second parish. Dr. Cadman assumed the pastorate soon after the division. He proceeded to build up the congregation with such an extent that another division had to be decided upon. Thus a third church grew.

In Brooklyn Dr. Cadman instantly was hailed as a worthy successor of the renowned Dr. Behrends. By his congregation he is regarded as the greatest preacher Brooklyn has known since Beecher. His church is always thronged and it is no unusual thing for Dr. Cadman to give as many as four sermons and addresses on a Sunday.

At one time he was filling lecture engagements two or three evenings a week, writing many articles for periodicals, acting as temporary president of Adelphi College and serving as pastor of his church. In addition he was chaplain of the 23d Regiment.

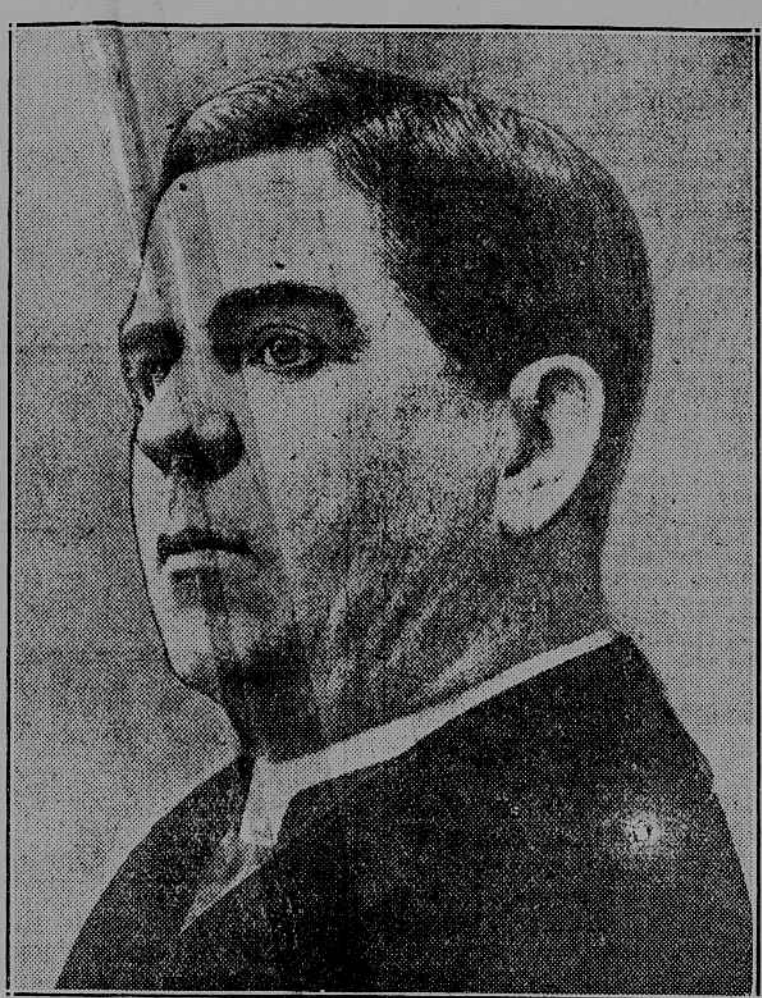

Finally he broke down under the strain. His physicians demanded that he give up some of his activities. He did, but now is working almost as hard as before the collapse.

He is not an impressive figure in the pulpit—until he begins to speak. Then there flows from his lips such beautiful language, such apt illustrations, such thrilling climaxes, that his personality is forgotten.

His sermons are not haphazard affairs. They are models of sermonic thought. His voice has some unusual tone qualities and rare carrying power. On the platform he is a many-sided man. Some of his sermons are so tender as to compel tears. Then, a few hours later, he will deliver an address that is as strong and rugged as his own personality.

His pulpit in Brooklyn is a community force. With his sermons great reform movements are initiated. If there is some united public effort needed, Dr. Cadman crystallizes the sentiment. He is a great organizer.

In the days when President Wilson said all America was not vocal and when public sentiment was organizing Dr. Cadman's voice was raised only to urge that the people keep their poise and weigh the issues carefully. But when the Lusitanian was sunk he had difficulty in keeping his own poise.

DR. S. PARKES CADMAN

summe the task of rehabilitating the old Central Church in this city, which changed its name to the Metropolitan Tabernacle.

He remained there five years and was called to the Central Congregational Church in Brooklyn. This had been one of the houses of worship that had given to Brooklyn a succession of pulpits. Its work had grown so large that it had become necessary to create a second parish. Dr. Cadman assumed the pastorate soon after the division. He proceeded to build up the congregation with such an extent that another division had to be decided upon. Thus a third church grew.

In Brooklyn Dr. Cadman instantly was hailed as a worthy successor of the renowned Dr. Behrends. By his congregation he is regarded as the greatest preacher Brooklyn has known since Beecher. His church is always thronged and it is no unusual thing for Dr. Cadman to give as many as four sermons and addresses on a Sunday.

At one time he was filling lecture engagements two or three evenings a week, writing many articles for periodicals, acting as temporary president of Adelphi College and serving as pastor of his church. In addition he was chaplain of the 23d Regiment.

Finally he broke down under the strain. His physicians demanded that he give up some of his activities. He did, but now is working almost as hard as before the collapse.

He is not an impressive figure in the pulpit—until he begins to speak. Then there flows from his lips such beautiful language, such apt illustrations, such thrilling climaxes, that his personality is forgotten.

His sermons are not haphazard affairs. They are models of sermonic thought. His voice has some unusual tone qualities and rare carrying power. On the platform he is a many-sided man. Some of his sermons are so tender as to compel tears. Then, a few hours later, he will deliver an address that is as strong and rugged as his own personality.

His pulpit in Brooklyn is a community force. With his sermons great reform movements are initiated. If there is some united public effort needed, Dr. Cadman crystallizes the sentiment. He is a great organizer.

In the days when President Wilson said all America was not vocal and when public sentiment was organizing Dr. Cadman's voice was raised only to urge that the people keep their poise and weigh the issues carefully. But when the Lusitanian was sunk he had difficulty in keeping his own poise.

He is not an impressive figure in the pulpit—until he begins to speak. Then there flows from his lips such beautiful language, such apt illustrations, such thrilling climaxes, that his personality is forgotten.

His sermons are not haphazard affairs. They are models of sermonic thought. His voice has some unusual tone qualities and rare carrying power. On the platform he is a many-sided man. Some of his sermons are so tender as to compel tears. Then, a few hours later, he will deliver an address that is as strong and rugged as his own personality.

His pulpit in Brooklyn is a community force. With his sermons great reform movements are initiated. If there is some united public effort needed, Dr. Cadman crystallizes the sentiment. He is a great organizer.

In the days when President Wilson said all America was not vocal and when public sentiment was organizing Dr. Cadman's voice was raised only to urge that the people keep their poise and weigh the issues carefully. But when the Lusitanian was sunk he had difficulty in keeping his own poise.

Mrs. C. J. Walker, Wealthiest Negro Woman, Is Dead

City Home, Showplace on Hudson, and $1,000,000 Fortune the Product of Invention of Hair Tonic

Mrs. C. J. Walker, who was said to be the wealthiest negro woman in the country, died yesterday at her summer home in Irvington-on-Hudson. Her fortune, which is estimated to exceed $1,000,000, she won by her own wits and enterprise.

She was the inventor and proprietor of a hair tonic, the fame of which has permeated to the most remote cabin farms of the South. Negroes everywhere know of Madame Walker and her hair tonic. That is why she died possessed of an estate at Irvington, a pretentious home at 108 West 136th Street, New York City, a hair tonic factory in Indianapolis employing 300 persons and securities whose value has not been computed.

She was born in Delta, La., fifty-two years ago. She was still a young woman, then living in Denver, Col., when she began to experiment with lotions for the hair. Her experiments were successful. No one was a more cordial believer in the efficacy of her preparation than Madame Walker herself.

It was not many years before she started its manufacture in a small way in Indianapolis. The enterprise thrived and the factory, fame and fortune of Madame Walker grew in proportion. For many years she lived in Indianapolis, exercising supervision over her factory. About six years ago she moved to New York.

The house which she built of Indiana limestone on West 136th Street occupied a plot where formerly three houses stood. It is known as "Madame Walker's Castle." She entertained Booker T. Washington and other notable figures of her race there during their visits to New York.

The belief is widespread that Madame Walker's hair tonic will take the kink out of negroes' hair and Madame Walker's attorney, Samuel A. Singerman, is said to have declared the fluid had that effect. F. B. Ransom, denied it to-day at her late home and said Madame Walker never had claimed that her discovery straightened hair.

Mr. Ransom notified Madame Walker's daughter, Lelia Robinson, who was at Panama, of her mother's death and the young woman is on her way home. The Walker home at Irvington is one of the showplaces of that wealthy suburb.

Bureau to Help Girls
Keep Tabs on Youths
Aimed at Vice and Will Tell Inquirers What Young Men Do in Idle Hours

TAMPA, Fla., May 25.—Tampa men are using a new form of salutation when they meet. Instead of the plain, old-fashioned "Good morning," it is now: "Good morning. How is your morality to-day?"

Tampa's men generally take as a joke the announced purpose of a new organization of 500 of the leading women of the city, who have organized the Women's Protective League with a determination to stamp out vice and to operate a bureau where any young girl can get information about the young man of her choice how he has been behaving and where he has been spending his time after formal calling hours.

Heading this new organization is Mrs. G. A. Webb, one of Tampa's society matrons, mother of twelve children and a grandmother three times. In spite of her large family she is young looking, and is one of the most active women in the city.

Speaking of this detail of the league's work, Mrs. Webb said one of the most prominent attorneys in Tampa had volunteered his services, and that in a few days the organization would have a postoffice box where any young woman might write and ask questions concerning any man in whom she was interested.

"If we can furnish information that can be proved," Mrs. Webb said, "and that we know to be correct, we will have no hesitancy in doing so. If a man is objectionable it will not hurt if people know it. Girls will be protected in their inquiries, and will not be required to give their names or addresses. The league expects to answer letters at any place designated."

Only severity of the members of the league will work openly, Mrs. Webb declared, because the others have "old reproaches" for husbands who will not let them be active in such an organization.

15,500,000 Women Vote
The suffrage victory in Iowa has increased the number of women in the United States eligible to vote in next year's presidential election to approximately 15,500,000.

Obituary
CHARLES C. ABBEY
CHICOPEE, Mass., May 25.—Charles C. Abbey, president of the Boston Arena Company, died to-day. He was sixty-six. Mr. Abbey had large real estate and banking interests in this city and Springfield.

SPECIAL NOTICE
HORLICK'S
THE ORIGINAL
MALTED MILK
Avoid Imitations and Substitutes

vice which takes the kink out of the hair of her race, died this morning at her residence here. In 1917 Mrs. Walker built a home in Tarrytown next to that of John D. Rockefeller, upon which she spent $100,000. On May 8 Mrs. Walker donated $5,000 to the National Conference on Lynching to stop the lynching of negroes in the South.

OBITUARY NOTES
LESLIE CHASE, seventy-six, a writer on international affairs, is dead at Atlantic City. He was born in New York and had spent much time in France.

HARRY SIMON TORMEY, forty-six, of 1737 Brooklyn Avenue, Brooklyn, died Saturday at his home of arterio sclerosis after a long illness.

AUSTIN M. HILL, seventy-nine, died Friday at his home in Rockville Centre, Long Island. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias of Baldwin, Long Island.

JOSEPH L. MURRAY, thirty-five, is dead at his home in Rockville Centre, Long Island. He was a member of the Knights of Pythias of Baldwin, Long Island.

MARY E. HINCHMAN, eighty-six, died Saturday at her home, 700 Riverside Drive. She was past master of Emmanuel Lodge, No. 23, of the Grand Lodge of the State of New York.

DR. WILLIAM EVERTS SMITH, seventy-five, formerly of New York, died at Cold Spring Neck, N. Y., Saturday.

Birth, Engagement, Marriage, Death and In Memoriam
Notices may be telephoned to The Tribune any time up to midnight for insertion in the next day's paper. Just call Beckman 3000 and send the notice as you wish it inserted. Bill for same will be mailed to you later.

BIRTHS
FLANDERS—Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Flanders (nee Esther Rubin), of 437 East 86th st., announce the birth of a son on May 24, May 25, New York City.

GOLDSTEIN—Mr. and Mrs. Jacob D. Goldstein (nee Esther Herman), of 124 West 11th st., announce the birth of a daughter on May 24.

GALDONI—Mr. and Mrs. George D. Becko announce the engagement of their daughter, Gertrude, to Dr. Nicholas Galdoni, of Detroit, Mich., Reception on Sunday, June 1, 1919, from 2 to 5 p. m. at 234 E. 34th st.

GOLDSTEIN—Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Weiss, of 1673 24 av., announce the engagement of their daughter, Gertrude, to Dr. Nicholas Galdoni, of Detroit, Mich., Reception on Sunday, June 1, 1919, from 2 to 5 p. m. at the Juliette, 103 West 11th st.

KRISTELLER—Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Smith, of Albany, N. Y., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Helen D. Salmon, to Lionel P. Kristeller, of Newark, N. J. The wedding will take place Sunday, June 1, at the Hotel Ten Eyck, Albany, N. Y.

SCHULTZ—Mr. and Mrs. M. Schultze, of Harrisburg, Penn., announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary, to Mr. Joseph Schultz, of New York, on May 25, 1919.

DEATHS
ALLISON—George, May 24, beloved father of Mrs. Fred Allison, O'Donnell and Katharine. Services Monday, 2:30 p. m., at residence, 588 West 14th st.

AMMERMAN—May 24, Mrs. Albert Ammerman, wife of Mr. Albert Ammerman, of 241 E. 10th st., died at her home on Saturday, May 24, 1919, at the home of her daughter, Amy Dunlap, Schermerhorn st., Brooklyn. Funeral services Monday, May 26, at 3:30 p. m.

BADGER—At Plainfield, N. J., Saturday, May 24, Elizabeth Scott Badger, wife of the late Walter Scott Badger, in the 72d year of her age. Private services will be held at the home of her son-in-law, Arthur L. Otterson, 1245 Evergreen av., at 8:15. Interment Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock.

BROWN—At his residence, 225 West 71st st., on Saturday, May 24, 1919, Elizabeth L. Brown, in the 72d year of her age. Private services will be held at the residence of her sister, Mrs. 71st st., on Monday at 10 a. m. Church interment at 11 o'clock.

CARBONE—Suddenly, on Friday, May 23, 1919, Emilio (Centy) Carbone, beloved husband of Ella Coulter. Funeral from his late residence, 713 Burke av., Bronx, on Thursday, May 23, at 8:30 a. m. to St. Mary's R. C. Church, 215th st. and White Plains av., where a solemn requiem mass will be offered at 11 o'clock.

COHN—On Saturday, May 24, Beatrice Ruth, aged 8 years, daughter of Lewis and Leonora Cohn. Services Monday, 8:30 p. m., at her late residence, 505 West 148th st.

CULLEN—Joseph J., beloved husband of Mamie Thompson and brother of James J. Cullen, Mrs. Esther Devine and Mrs. J. Cullen. Funeral from his late residence, 245 Lafayette st., on Monday at 10 a. m., thence to St. Patrick's (old) Cathedral.

DAVENPORT—On May 24, 1919, Mary Davenport, wife of John Davenport, died at her home, 377 1/2 Gates av., Brooklyn, on Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

DI GENNO—Antonio, Thursday, May 22, beloved husband of Emma Di Genno, at his residence, 1538 Topping av., Bronx. Requiem mass Monday, 11 a. m., Mount Carmel Church, 18th st. and Belmont av. Interment Woodlawn.

DIERZGA—At his residence, 44 West 10th st., on Sunday, May 25, 1919, Juliana Dierzga, wife of Frederick Dierzga, daughter of the late William Cullen, of Philadelphia. Philadelphia papers please copy.

DUFFY—Anna L., on Friday, May 23, at her residence, 2460 Broadway. Funeral Monday, 10 o'clock, from Church of St. Gregory, West 90th st.

FIEDER—Harriet Eaton Fieder, daughter of the late William and Elizabeth Eaton, May 24, at the residence of her son, Frederick W. Fieder, 168 Hillside av., Nutley, N. J. Services and interment May 26, at 2 p. m., from the home.

FISCHER—At Westchester, N. Y., on Saturday, May 24, Eleise Burdette, daughter of George N. and Charlotte H. Fischer, aged 15 years. Funeral services Tuesday, May 27, at 2 p. m., at her residence, Wilcox st., Yonkers, N. Y. Interment: Woodlawn.

FLATEAU—Felix, beloved husband of Rose and brother of Henry, in his forty-fifth year. Funeral service in the Grand Lodge Room, Maconic Temple, 21st st. and 6th av., Monday, the 26th inst., at 8 o'clock p. m.

FLINT—Austin Jerome, May 25, 1919, beloved son of Samuel and Olivia Flint, in the 17th year of his age. Notice of funeral hereafter.

FOREMAN—James Hewlett (Mrs. William), Sunday, May 25, 1919, aged 70, beloved mother of Stella and C. Milton Foreman and Nellie Foreman. Funeral services at her late home at Freeport, Long Island, at 2 p. m. Wednesday, May 28. It is requested that flowers be omitted. Interment private.

FOX—C. Brainerd, on May 24. Services at Bedford Park Presbyterian Church, 20th st. and Bainbridge av., on Tuesday, May 27, at 2:30.

FYLES—Sara Oliver, CAMPBELL FUNERAL CHURCH SERVICES, Broadway, 86th st., Monday, 11 a. m. at Oakland Cemetery.

GOLDING—Alice, beloved daughter of the late William J. and Alice H. Golding, May 24, at the residence of her son, 95th st., Monday, May 26, 10 a. m. Interment at the Church of the Holy Nativity, 12th st. and 4th av. Automobile cortege.

HARRIS—May 24, Stanislaus Harry, in his 72d year. Funeral service Monday evening, 8 o'clock, residence, 675 East 138th st.

HEINRICH—On Saturday, May 24, 1919, Frederick William, beloved husband of Jennie M. Heinrich. Funeral services at the Central Congregational Church, Hancock st. and 10th av., Brooklyn, Tuesday, May 27, at 8 p. m.

HILL—At Rockville Centre, Long Island, May 23, 1919, Austin Melvin Hill, in his 75th year. Funeral services at his residence, 187 Maple av., Rockville Centre, Long Island, Monday evening, 8 o'clock, interment Greenfield Cemetery.

HUGHES—On Thursday, May 23, 1919, Mary E. Lee, widow of Frank Hughes, in her 85th year. Funeral services Monday, May 27, at 2 p. m., from the residence of her son, 83 Kips Bay Road, Brooklyn, N. Y.

HUGHES—On Thursday, May 23, 1919, Mary E. Lee, widow of Frank Hughes, in her 85th year. Funeral services Monday, May 27, at 2 p. m., from the residence of her son, 83 Kips Bay Road, Brooklyn, N. Y.

KING—May 24, sister of Mrs. Henry King, of 100 West 10th st., died at her home on Saturday, May 24, 1919, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth King, 1439 Amsterdam av., at 2 p. m., Monday, May 26, 1919. Interment Woodlawn.

LARSEN—On Saturday, May 24, 1919, Larsen, aged 57 years. Funeral from his late residence, 1439 Amsterdam av., at 2 p. m., Monday, May 26, 1919. Interment Greenwood.

MARTIN—On Saturday, May 24, at Norwich, Conn., William Martin, in his 64th year. Funeral services at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Grace Moore-Martin, in his 51st year. Funeral from his late residence, New Britain, Conn., on Monday, May 27, at 2 p. m. Interment Calvary Cemetery.

MECKERT—On May 24, 1919, Mrs. Anna Meckert, beloved wife of the late William Meckert, in her 85th year. Funeral services at her daughter's, Mrs. Elizabeth Schneider, 1439 Amsterdam av., at 2 p. m., Monday, May 26, 1919. Interment Woodlawn.

MOFFETT—On May 23, 1919, William Moffett, in his 65th year. Interment at Woodlawn Cemetery on Monday, May 26.